My life will not be the same because of what you taught me,” said Davia, a young lady who attended the evangelistic meetings conducted by Hartland students in Southwest Jamaica every night for four weeks this summer. Although already a Seventh-day Adventist, she said, “I was fed spiritually. The messages appealed to my intellect and reason, not just to my emotions.”

One young man who was baptized at the end of the series had left the church because he was misled by the false doctrine that the Holy Spirit is not God. After studying with team members, he declared, “What you showed me from the Bible is crystal clear! I am now going to be baptized.”

These were two of many lives changed because seven Hartland students and two staff members held an evangelistic series with nightly health talks. They also conducted Vacation Bible School (VBS) for children ages 3 to 12, Bible studies for youth ages 13 to 18, and a health expo for four Sundays which included cooking classes, health assessment, and presentations on the eight laws of health and natural remedies.

The young men stayed with the pastor, who said, “I am so impressed with these Hartland students, because they are so well-rounded. I admire them. I’ve never seen a group like them.”

Kirkland Scott, junior pastoral evangelism major and speaker for the first two weeks of the series helped the pastor board up his house before Hurricane Dean hit Jamaica. “I praise the Lord for sending me to Hartland. It is because of Hartland that I am able to do this,” he said.

A young lady told Michael Dantzie, also a pastoral evangelism major and speaker, “When you preach, you make the Bible so simple! You teach, and I leave with understanding.”

Michael was amazed that many members told him, “Here is my address. I want all your sermon notes and Bible study material, please...” He says, “I thank God that I listened to counsel from the pen of inspiration that advises ministers to have their sermons written, so that people can have them to study after you preach.”

Samuel and Jennifer Allen worked overtime fixing up their house so that the young ladies of the team could stay there.
while they moved next door to Samuel’s parents’ home. After eating with the team for six weeks, Jennifer exclaimed, “I thank God that you came! After eating delicious vegan food, there’s no way I can go back to eating meat! I’m changing my diet.”

VBS was held from 9:15 A.M. to 1:30 P.M. five days a week for two weeks, and included lunch for all the children. One of them, Natasha, learned all of Young Disciple’s “Truth 4 Youth” songs, and sang them throughout the day.

God opened the door for this team to work with the West Jamaica Conference of SDAs at a community services exhibition/health fair. They held cooking classes, gave out food samples, and offered massages.

Hartland Publications donated twenty-five boxes of books, which were gratefully received. One teenager told the team, “I read the whole Steps to Christ in one night.”

Alysha Hollingshead, organizer of the mission trip, says, “My training at my work stations and my teachers at Hartland really helped me to learn organizational skills, leadership skills, and how to get along with people. At VBS we had over a hundred children every day, so I was very thankful that I learned about classroom control.”

We praise God for using our young people to make a difference in the lives of the Jamaicans last summer. The long term goal of this group is to start a lifestyle center in Jamaica. The team found that the people there are hungry for the truth and a better way of life. Please pray for this project as plans are already being made to go back.
“Our family always tried to do gardens, but we never had much success. Then I came to Hartland and had to take the gardening class. I was very skeptical at first, because I don’t like getting dirty. But I determined to do my best, and now my garden is looking awesome! It has taught me so many lessons, and I’ve decided that when I get my own place, I definitely would like to have a small garden.”

Nicole James, Alabama

“The summer gardening class taught me not only about a personal life in Christ, but it also taught me how to do evangelism more efficiently. How we take care of our plots is just like how we should minister to the people in the world, taking care of them and bringing them to Christ. I am very thankful for this knowledge which will help me in my future ministry.”

Yik Foo Soon, Malaysia

“At first I wondered, ‘What does gardening have to do with media (my major)?’ Since then I’ve realized that gardening actually is the basis of education, so it impacts all majors. In the garden I can see God’s design; I see God’s photography in the garden. I think it is essential for every student to take agriculture, because it really does give you a foundation for what you’re going to do. It has definitely impacted my life.”

Ruth Collins, Pennsylvania

“Midway through the class I realized how fast an hour could go, so I started using five minutes before class to pull weeds in my plot. The cumulative effect of doing this has kept the weed population down greatly. I’m applying this simple concept in my life. Contact with plants day after day has a softening, subduing effect that has helped give me a new outlook on life.”

Noah Hill, Virginia
My name is Gao Na, and I am from mainland China. I believe that God touches your heart to give unselfishly to Hartland’s Missionary Training Fund so that young people like me can be prepared to take the gospel to the world in this generation.

I first heard about Hartland College from Tat Ying Wong, a Hartland graduate who came to my home town in China. He taught Bible classes to other missionaries and spoke to the young people, giving his personal testimony. Since my mother is a missionary and my father is a preacher, they were interested in the school he attended, and so was I.

Unfortunately, Hartland College just seemed like an unrealistic dream. My family is not rich, and it is hard for most Chinese to study abroad. I did not expect that three years later this impossible dream would become a reality. It is very hard for Chinese to get American visas, but before I went to the embassy, I prayed that whatever happened would be God’s will. When I arrived at the embassy, it seemed as if God had already prepared everything. The lady who interviewed me only asked a few questions before telling me I could pick up my visa that afternoon! I now understand that God had a specific purpose for me, and that purpose included coming to Hartland College.

When I first came to Hartland, it was a great culture shock. My English was poor and classes were difficult for me. Sometimes I could not even understand my teachers! I would wake up earlier than everyone else to study, even if it left me tired all day long. It was trials like these which taught me that no matter how hard the situation may be, if we come close to Jesus and ask Him to help us, He will never let us down.

When I feel like I can’t keep up with work or studies, I pray and God helps me with whatever I need. I will graduate with health and Bible instruction majors in three years. When I go back to China, I want to help bring physical and spiritual healing to people so they can have life not only in this world but also in heaven.

Many times I marvel that out of the billions of people in China, God chose me to experience true education here. I believe God wants me to pass on what I have learned by teaching my own people. It won’t be easy, but I know Jesus will help me.
The dark history of North American slavery was foremost in his mind when Trustmore Parangeta arrived in 1996 from Zimbabwe, Africa, to attend Hartland College, knowing that prejudice against blacks still existed. “It was my first time to live amid the white fellows. I was afraid and lonely, but the love I received from the teachers and my fellow students far exceeded my expectations. My fears left me, and I enjoyed my studies.”

At Hartland, Trustmore found true education. “Hartland uplifts and holds high the standard as the Bible and Spirit of Prophecy specify it. Students eat healthfully and dress modestly. I was a heavy meat eater and could not drop unhealthful teas, milk, and eggs. But I praise the Lord that eating the healthful dishes at Hartland helped me to drop my unhealthful eating habits! I am also grateful that male students are required to take the cooking class, because in my culture men don’t cook. Now I cook, and my family has become vegan-vegetarian.

“Most importantly, I learned what constitutes true Christianity: the Three Angels’ Messages, given in their true sense. This is what the world most needs in these last hours of Earth’s history.

“The outreach programs especially impressed me that I needed to go back to my people in Africa. I longed to go home and care for them as the brothers and sisters at Hartland had cared for me.”

It has now been seven years since Trustmore’s graduation in 2000, and he is carrying forward that divine calling. He is currently a pastor and, with a team of eleven evangelists, is spreading the Three Angels’ Messages to every town and village in Zimbabwe. Their ministry includes teaching the health message, staging cooking school seminars, building churches, and giving Bible studies. “We are conducting baptisms every week. Twelve churches have been planted, plus twenty-five companies. We are entering new zones, and plans are being made to increase the number of evangelists so that we can plant more churches.”

Praise the Lord for the way He is using another one of our dear graduates to finish His work! Trustmore says, “My prayer is that the Lord will bind us together to finish the work.” May we each commit ourselves fully to the Lord’s service and work together to help answer Trustmore’s prayer.

Through the preaching of God’s Word at Hartland’s camp meeting, the essence of the Third Angel’s Message has become the essence of my life,” says Sandy Bradley, a newcomer at this year’s summer camp meeting.

Shortly before coming to camp meeting, Sandy learned the truth about the 144,000—that they will be a people totally victorious and will be translated without seeing death. “I yearned for more understanding of this special group of people and the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation,” she explains. “I heard that I would find answers at the camp meeting at Hartland, so I prayed, ‘Lord, if what they have to share will affect my eternal salvation, please show me and make a way for me to get there.’ He did just that.

“I cannot describe adequately the changes that camp meeting has made in my life. Now with new understanding of how with fear and trembling I should work out my own salvation, please show me and make a way for me to get there.” He did just that.

Sandy came to camp meeting with a deep desire to learn more about the 144,000. We can be prepared to be a part of the 144,000. Even in the health and agricultural workshops, the presenters emphasized how each topic was pertinent to our spiritual growth as God’s remnant people. “Dr. Thrash beautifully demonstrated how the health message is inseparable from the gospel and that we must live up to these truths as our Master did,” says Sandy. “As He went about healing while He preached the gospel, so we should show the same care for others.”

“Without hearing the present truth that was showered upon this camp meeting,” she concludes, “I might be eternally lost. Today, I know that there is no greater goal or prize to reach for than to be granted a place with my Savior as an overcomer, enduring to the end.”

This year’s camp meeting truly was a blessing, not only for Sandy but also for many others. In closing, Sandy appeals, “Please do not miss Hartland’s camp meeting next year! God willing, I will be there, experiencing another week of inspiring messages.”

We’re looking forward to seeing you there, too! Start making plans now! by Staff Writers
“I'll Be Back Next Year!”

Until then, Ezekiel has returned home to share what he learned at Piedmont Valley Youth Bible Camp.

“When I go home, I’m going to start a program in my church to help the youth,” declared 16-year-old Ezekiel Leyva after two weeks at Piedmont Valley Youth Bible Camp (PVYBC) this past summer. Ezekiel and three of his friends rode all the way from California – a six-days’ journey – just to attend PVYBC. Was it worth it? Definitely!

“Before I came to this camp, I was into hip-hop, and I had created my own CD with my friends. I was really in a struggle of good versus evil. I was trying to be on both sides, but I didn’t know how I was going to end up.”

Then a friend from Ezekiel’s church mentioned Piedmont Camp. His curiosity aroused, Ezekiel gathered a few friends and started planning a cross-country trip. Destination: a little Bible camp in the hills of rural Virginia.

“When I got here I found that the schedule was packed. I hadn’t expected that. At the previous camps I’d been to, no one was really expected to be on time or to keep their things organized. But at PVYBC everything was organized, and you had to be on time! Personally I am not organized, so it definitely helped me develop those skills.”

Ezekiel found all his classes so intensely interesting that he couldn’t pick a favorite! “I liked all of my classes! I didn’t know about natural remedies until I took the medical missionary class. For me, it opened a new level of thinking about how to solve people’s problems. I also had never been canoeing, so it was cool learning a new way to have recreation. In crafts outreach, I enjoyed finding out how I can use my creativity to bless others.”

What impacted Ezekiel most was the dedication of his counselors. “At other camps I’ve attended, the counselors were paid, but at Piedmont they were volunteering. It made a big impression on me that they would spend time with youth, just to help us.

“My counselor and I had a very deep Bible study about conversion and overcoming sin. It changed my perspective, and I hope to carry out what he taught me. I want to have victory over my sins; I want to be a better person.”

Life will still be hard for Ezekiel. Satan doesn’t rest in the battle for souls, especially when he sees he is losing one of his devotees. But now Ezekiel has the tools to resist him; he has learned how to study the Bible for himself and how to have victory over sin. Moreover, he has returned home with a burning desire to share what he has learned.
“Thank you for the books you sent. We took your literature to a crusade where 95 people were baptized, and gave it to them as gifts. People here are thirsty for the Word of God. Please send us more literature and Bibles!” – G.N., Kenya

“Thank you so very much for the three books I just received upon request. Our Lord has provided so much material through your ministry to help me in my spiritual growth and to share with others. I praise God for your ministry that cares about those of us in bonds who are keeping the commandments of God and have the faith of Jesus.” – J. H., inmate in SC

“Thank you for the parcel you sent. I have been looking for these books for a long time. I have just gone through the book you sent entitled The Three Angels – Who Are They? Please, can you give me permission to translate it into the Malawi and Zambian languages? I will send it to you for printing.” – A. M., Malawi

“I really enjoy working with the students,” says Cynthia with a laugh. “They’re just full of joy and love for the Lord, and it’s very contagious!”

Cynthia Moore and her daughter Lily, originally from Ohio, moved to our area in January so that Lily could attend Hartland Elementary School. Cynthia recently joined the lifestyle center staff as head of the housekeeping department. She says, “I want to serve the Lord in whatever capacity He has for me and to watch my daughter learn more and more about the Lord.” Eight-year-old Lily, who has just entered the fourth grade, adds, “I like Hartland. I’ve made a lot of friends here.”

Welcome, Cynthia and Lily! Praise the Lord for sending us faithful friends to help in His work.

VOLUNTEER

“My Lord, I want to do your will. Please guide me,” prayed Melissa Chung during her first days as a volunteer at Hartland Institute. A twenty-one-year-old student from the University of Central Florida, Melissa had decided to put her accounting skills to work during her summer break. Little did she know that it would become a turning point in her life.

In addition to helping in the business office, Melissa volunteered a few hours each day in the lifestyle center. As she worked and studied the Bible and Spirit of Prophecy, she felt the Lord calling her to a different kind of work. “I kept seeing signs that the Lord was calling me to medical missionary work. I know there are many CPAs in the world already, and now I feel the Holy Spirit calling me to a greater work. I’m so much happier working for God!”

Melissa is especially grateful for the spiritual refreshment she found at Hartland. “Being surrounded by nature, with few distractions, I was able to build a stronger foundation in God. Now when I go back into the world, I will be prepared to stand firm.”

Melissa has found volunteering beneficial, not only for Hartland, but also for herself. She says, “As a volunteer, you’re not paid monetarily; you get paid from God’s blessings. And you’ll receive them abundantly by coming here.”
Did you know that the majority of God's remnant church is still worshiping Him in ignorance on Sunday? That's what The Great Controversy, p. 383, says. These precious souls must hear the message for this time and be called out of the fallen churches of Babylon. Soon, the choice between Sabbath and Sunday will escalate into a choice between the seal of God and the mark of the beast.

We are also told that the seeds of literature which we plant now will spring up into a great harvest of souls in those trying times. Anticipating that great harvest is the primary reason we are in the literature business! It is also the reason we recently released Last Generation's fourth edition of the special Sabbath issue—God's Gift of Rest, first printed in 1991, barely two years after Last Generation magazine started.

To date, this has been one of our most popular special issues, which is why it has been reprinted more than any other issue.

With each reprint, we have updated the content and changed the cover and title. However, certain features still remain. Each article shares a special facet of the Sabbath truth. There is always a Bible study on the Sabbath, as well as a personal testimony about a Sabbath-keeper who chose to honor God's holy day, even at grave personal risk. You will also find an article on current events regarding Sunday legislation and its relation to the fulfillment of Bible prophecy.

Make no mistake about it. The world is being drawn closer and closer into the last great issues in the controversy between Christ and Satan. We have no time to lose. We must get our message out while there is still time.

By faith, we doubled our print run because we knew that you would want to order cases for sharing our special Sabbath truth and its implications for end-time Christians. The Sabbath is still the test of loyalty for God's remnant people, and it is our unique privilege to share His end-time message with those who have not heard it.
Believing that God had appointed him to “save” European society from moral collapse, Charlemagne waded through seas of blood in the 8th and 9th centuries to convert people to the Roman Catholic Church. For his noble endeavors, the church made him emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, introducing the concept of the divine right of kings. It seemed logical: since the church was God’s representative on earth, kings should rule by her approval or decree.

Religious and secular rulers have often relied on a supposed “divine command” to justify dominion over others and impose unpopular religious practices, Christian and Muslim alike. Salvation of society has been at the root of much political thought and action.

European history is painted red with the failed concept of the divine right of kings. The rise of secularism is largely a reaction to its misuse. Many people falsely assumed that secularism would keep theological ideas from inflaming minds and stirring up messianic passions. This is why many Westerners fail to understand the power of radical Islam. It is why they also fail to perceive the steady tread of events pushing the West to respond with a religious zealotry of her own.

Yet Bible prophecy teaches that a time is coming when unprecedented religious zeal, particularly for Sunday worship, will be the central passion in political thought. People will be punished and killed in the name of purifying society and getting unity at the shrine, because it is supposedly God’s will. (See Revelation 13 and Matthew 24.) In America, this is developing right before our eyes. Reference to a divine command has become an underlying feature with some politicians. For example, President Bush justified his presidency as the will of God. Democrats are adjusting some of their key political positions to align themselves with religious voters.

America has proven that separating church and state in a republican form of government has provided a stable society while guaranteeing full religious freedom. Religious thought and practice need not be stifled in order to protect society from its abuse. But this brave experiment could be lost as religious zealotry increasingly shapes American politics.

If the separation of church and state is lost, politics could once again involve religion, and religion could once again motivate some of the most barbarous behavior, dating back to the Dark Ages. And according to Bible prophecy, this is eventually what will play out at the end of this world’s history.
Two rival gang members meet at Hartland Lifestyle Center

After I became a Seventh-day Adventist, I started praying for opportunities to witness to those who shared my background as a gang member. A few months ago, the Lord answered my prayer in an unexpected way. He brought a rival gang member to the Hartland Lifestyle Center, where I work.

Marcel Martinez arrived, pale and coughing. He complained of severe headaches and a nagging pain in his back, probably due to his liver cancer. Marcel’s doctor had given him one year to live. However, these physical maladies were just the tip of the iceberg.

Marcel told me, “I have not cried or shown emotion for many years, even when one of my parents died.” My heart went out to him, and I prayed that the Lord would open a door for somebody to give him Bible studies.

One day while we were walking, he opened up to me. Marcel and I are about the same age, and as he related his experiences, I realized that he was from one of the gangs I used to fight against. The Lord was answering my prayer!

We began studying together. For eight nights, we studied the simple steps to Christ. Soon his countenance changed. He started to smile and to be happy, asking questions and interacting. At our farewell meal at the end of the session, Marcel gave a testimony. Tears welled up in his eyes as he said, “The people here really try to help, and they have made me feel like family. I want to follow the same lifestyle that they are doing here.”

Marcel completely broke his smoking and drinking habits. He also left behind all caffeinated products and decided to become a vegan-vegetarian. He is excited about continuing the program he learned at the Hartland Lifestyle Center, and, as far as I know now, he is continuing it. Before he left he told me, choking back tears, “I am so happy and thankful that I came through the Hartland Lifestyle Center. I’m like a new man!”

Marcel and I continue to stay in contact, and I call him several times a week to give him Bible studies. I got a call from him recently, and he declared, “Next week I’m taking my family to church!” Please join me in praying for him as he makes these significant and vital changes in his life.
In a very interesting turn of events, Italy recently yielded to papal pressure. You may have noticed that Romano Prodi, Italy’s prime minister, resigned on February 21, when he had every chance of forming a new coaliton government. Why?

Prodi is a strong advocate of homosexual civil unions, which the Catholic Church strongly opposes. He had even been developing a law requiring the government to recognize these civil unions in the same way as marriage. But there was opposition to this law among his Catholic allies in the coalition government he was trying to form.

While the mainstream press was saying that Prodi resigned over a vote related to Italy’s involvement in NATO operations in Afghanistan, something altogether different was happening. On February 19, Prodi met with officials at the Vatican. Four days later, Catholic World News (CWN) reported, “Romano Prodi—struggling to forge a new ruling coalition in the Italian parliament...has drafted an agreement that will not require his coalition allies to support civil unions.... The 12-point agreement seemed likely to draw enough support to return Prodi to the parliamentary leadership post. Foreign Minister Massimo D’Alema, a Prodi ally, told reporters that the coalition ‘can continue on this basis.’”

Then on February 26, news sources were saying that Prodi was likely to be retained as prime minister because of the 12-point agreement, the key point of which was Prodi’s new stance on civil unions (not the issue of NATO and Afghanistan). Bloomberg.com wrote, “To lure support from moderates, Prodi watered down a 208-page program crafted during his April election campaign. The revised version is a 12-point list that drops legislation that authorizes same-sex unions, a measure opposed by some Catholics in the coalition.”

Prodi regained the position of prime minister by a narrow margin (162 to 157).

As I followed this story and then discovered the truth, I realized that Rome has not changed. Rome pressures leaders of nations, particularly Catholic nations, to comply with her positions. While we may agree with Rome concerning civil unions in principle, Rome is using this issue to flex her muscles in Italy. Prodi was forced to yield if he would regain his government role. It reminds me of a time when a king was required to stand barefoot outside in freezing weather until the pope thought him repentant enough to regain his throne.

The Vatican is manipulating the nations into submission with determined purpose. Time is running out. We need to get our lives right with Jesus now.
I often wonder, “If probation were to close today, where would I stand?” Perhaps you have contemplated this, too. After all, when probation closes, neither the wicked nor the saints will be aware that this climactic event has taken place.

“So when the irrevocable decision of the sanctuary has been pronounced and the destiny of the world has been forever fixed, the inhabitants of the earth will know it not. The forms of religion will be continued by a people from whom the Spirit of God has been finally withdrawn....” The Great Controversy, p. 615.

Jesus lovingly invites all to join His saints and live with Him throughout eternity. However, when every living person has made his or her final decision, probation will close.

“An angel returning from the earth announces that his work is done; the final test has been brought upon the world, and all who have proved themselves loyal to the divine precepts have received ‘the seal of the living God.’ Then Jesus ceases His intercession in the sanctuary above. He lifts His hands and with a loud voice says, ‘It is done’....” The Great Controversy, p. 613.

However, soon after the close of probation, those who have been students of God’s Word will know what has taken place. They will see the plagues falling, and they will recognize that Christ has completed His mediation and atonement for the human race. He has left the Holy of Holies and taken off His high priestly garments, never again to wear them in the history of eternity. He is garbed in His kingly attire.

When this realization dawns upon those who understand final events, what will your reaction be? Will it be one of unspeakable anguish and despair? Or will you be among the 144,000, who have gone through the great time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation?

The real issue is not, “Will we be ready when probation closes?” The issue is, “Are we ready now, should our probation close?” Our living connection with Jesus, as we surrender fully each day to His will and service, is the only preparation for the eternal kingdom.

I pray that you will join me in determining to have that unfaltering walk with Jesus, so that nothing can separate us from the love of God. I pray that we will all be together in that glorious home which God has prepared for us.

Yours in the blessed hope,
