“The Best Week of My Life!”
As the clock ticked towards registration time and the buzz of last-minute preparations ceased, once again Piedmont Valley Youth Bible Camp (PVYBC) counselors and staff could be seen huddled together, praying for the hearts of their soon-arriving campers.

Friends, great activities, interesting classes, and yummy food have always been highlights for returning PVYBC campers. But the most important highlight is the growth in faith that takes place during a week packed with spiritual adventure. That adventure was led by Deep Bible Study teacher, Mike Kwon, who taught us how to study the Bible, focusing on the sanctuary and campfire speaker Sean Myers, who encouraged us to surrender all aspects of our lives to God, specifically our music.

“I made many new friends and came closer to Jesus!” was the resounding chorus toward the end of camp.

During campfire testimonies on Sabbath evening, campers and staff saw their friends recommit their lives to Christ. One camper said, “I just spent the best week of my life!”

Another camper with an especially close-knit unit told his counselor with tears in his eyes that he didn’t want to leave camp, because their unit would be split up. The counselors’ comforting words struck a chord in many hearts. “We won’t be split up forever. We’ll meet again in heaven.”

Campers, counselors and staff joined hands around the campfire as they sang “Side by Side”, while memories of scripture songs, line call, deep Bible study, recreation, outreach, theme classes, campfire messages, trials, and blessings flooded their minds.

As the song ended and many tears dried, determination spread across the faces of singing young people. What started at this camp would not end with good-byes. They would take their newfound skills and faith home with them, and they would meet in heaven!

“If only one camper had been brought closer to Jesus through our efforts,” agreed counselors Kristofer Hendrickson and David Hernandez, “it would have been worth it.”

“The Best Week of My Life!” by Megan Mays and staff writers
I made many sincere Christian friends who like me came to camp to learn more about Jesus and have a closer walk with Him. The first time I attended PVYBC was in ‘06. I made many friends that I still keep in touch with today! Though some are far away, it is nice to have someone to keep in contact with who is being raised in a Godly atmosphere the same way that I am. – Girl, 15

Camp made my relationship with God stronger and the whole week definitely brought me a lot to my knees in prayer. – Girl, 15

I was brought closer to God, and I now try to do my devotions every morning...and I’m exercising more... Now I’m able to pray without it feeling different or weird, and I’m studying the Bible. – Boy, 13

The main experience that I encountered was growing together as a unit. One of the campers in my unit was created differently and had some issues in his life. It was good to spend some one-on-one time with him talking about God and praying with him. I learned a lot just in this experience...I learned that closeness to God is what matters. – Boy, 16

Our daughter absolutely loved camp! She is keeping in touch with her new friends. She has been struggling with her attitude some, but you all had an amazing effect in her heart and mind. – Parent of Camper

I got an amazing spiritual blessing. Before camp my focus was not on Christ, but at camp with all the spirituality involved, I got my focus back. And I’m so thankful for that. – Girl, 13

Camp is the highlight of my year. – Boy, 14

Because of PVYBC, my children will, God willing, be attending Hartland College. Sean Myers had a big impact. I am so thankful to you for having this camp. – Parent of Camper
Declaring His Praise in the Islands*

by Giancarlo De Miranda

I t is a privilege to work as an intern with Pastor Keala Thompson, who understands both Present Truth and the science of true education.

I work as a Bible worker in the surrounding areas of his two churches—Puna and Honoka’a, on the Big Island of Hawaii. Another aspect of my work is to help Seventh-day Adventists know their Bibles better. I started a Bible class at the Puna SDA church to help the members understand more about end-time prophecies.

One weekend when I arrived at the Honoka’a church to work with their Bible worker, Clayton Hanchett, he told me that members of the Shepherd’s Rod (a breakaway group of the SDA church) were holding meetings in a church member’s home. We attended in order to try to protect the members against their false teachings. The meeting did not go anywhere; the church members were confused because they themselves don’t search the Scriptures. After that night I determined that wherever I have opportunity in an Adventist church, I must preach messages that encourage our people to study their Bibles more earnestly so that they won’t accept deceptions so easily. Some have departed from the heresy, but a few still continue in that path.

When Pastor Keala asked me if I could lead a colporteur program here on the Big Island for a month, without hesitating I answered, “Yes!” I love colporteuring. Five young men, including myself, took up the challenge to conquer the Island for Jesus by spreading the Present Truth through literature evangelism. As usual, the canvassing work is a blessing, not only for the community but also for the colporteurs. All of us had powerful experiences with God at the doors.

Three days after the colporteur program ended, Pastor Keala, others, and I started “The School of the Prophets.” It was a one-week course on the Three Angels’ Messages, including all the principles of true education. The students had the option to choose from three different training stations: agriculture, construction, or cooking. In the morning, Pastor Keala gave worship talks on true education versus false education, and I taught the Bible class. After lunch, teachers and students worked together. We closed the day with another worship service on true education. It was amazing to see the transformation that took place in the lives of the students. They were all on fire for the Lord.

At the present moment I am organizing a prophecy seminar to prepare God’s church for the last-day events.

For everything I have accomplished here in Hawaii I give glory to God. I also want to thank Hartland College for equipping me to work for Jesus.

* Isaiah 42:12.
John Shouldn’t Be Alive

My uncle, John Harmon, shouldn’t be alive today. But by God’s grace he is. Let me explain.

John had lost a kidney to cancer, was taking insulin shots daily for diabetes, had major blockage in three main arteries to his heart and the fourth artery was 75 percent occluded. His doctor advised surgery or he would die.

Rather than surgery, John elected to try the health program at Hartland. He and his wife, Elizabeth, both entered the health program. Elizabeth did not have any physical ailments that warranted a lifestyle change, but she wanted to learn about healthy eating in order to help John when they returned to their home.

Upon their arrival, John asked to see a physician as he had forgotten to pack his insulin. He was informed that soon he wouldn’t need his insulin and not to worry about it; the staff would keep an eye on his glucose levels.

John and Elizabeth proceeded through the program with a regimen of exercise, diet and prayer, among other things. Before John came to the Hartland Lifestyle program, he could not walk from his kitchen to his living room door without running out of breath and having to rest. During his exercise routine at Hartland, he was told to go as far as he could on the daily walks and he would be ‘picked up’ on the way back. Now he walks three miles a day and could probably do more!

It has been over 14 years, and I am very happy to report that both John and Elizabeth are in good health. John looks better than I have ever seen him and his face glows (a byproduct of knowing the love of God). They both tell me: “We both praise God for blessing us with more years of quality life than we would have had otherwise.”

The Hartland Lifestyle Center provides information, physical assistance, and a caring environment for those who desire improvement in their health, both physical and spiritual.

Graduation 2009 began on Thursday night, June 4, with a special concert by Three Angels’ Chorale and the campus choir. Pastor JC Perozo, special assistant to the President, was the speaker for the weekend. He presented the need for the graduates, their family members, and friends “to prepare souls to stand blameless at the coming of Jesus Christ” which is the motto of the graduating class. It is always inspiring to hear the graduates share how God has worked in their lives. Dr. Standish ended the weekend with a challenge for both the graduates and the assembled company—to fulfill God’s purpose for them.

I teach at a growing Adventist high school called Anderson near Gweru, Zimbabwe. About 120 of its 400 students have no Adventist background. Some of these students end up accepting the Three Angels’ Messages through various in-reach programs conducted by the school.

Early last year I started receiving a few precious copies of Last Generation magazine for small-scale distribution from Pastor Rodney Millin, local conference departmental director and evangelist (Hartland College graduate, 1997). Before long, I discovered that the students always looked forward to receiving another Last Generation since the articles have a rare characteristic freshness and appeal. The publication has enlightened the minds of many enquiring youth. Here are some comments from my class (Form 3/Tenth Grade):

“The issue of tithe has been hard for me. I never understood why I should return tithe when afterward I would be left with insufficient pocket money. Miss Clancy’s story in the Last Generation magazine inspired me and helped me in my spiritual life. I now know that God helps those who are faithful to him. I no longer worry about how much remains after returning a faithful tithe. I also share these stories at every opportunity. My prayer is that everyone under the sun might get a hold of this publication.” Carlos Dube

“The Last Generation magazine taught me several things and enlightened me on the issue of Sunday worship. I was a believer, though not an Adventist. My teacher gave me a Last Generation magazine which had articles on Sabbath-keeping. I read these and my life was never the same. I never used to keep the Sabbath, neither did I go to church on Saturday, but thank God I found the way. I now observe the Sabbath and I am planning on getting baptized.” Charlotte Mapfumo

“I read the Last Generation issue which had an article on mocking God. The story about a man who was destroyed by a bombshell after blasphemy changed my life. I used to listen to secular artists such as Winky Dee, T.I. and ‘50 cent’ whose lyrics sometimes bring reproach to the name of God. I have since stopped listening to these. Pray for me not to be lured into that kind of music again.” Tawanda Chavingira

May God richly bless those who work day and night for this publication to reach the hearts of my children. I know your reward is great in heaven.... O there’ll be joy when the work is done! ❖
NEW STAFF

The Manuels

We welcome Mike and Rowena Manuel and their five children: Matthew, Megan, David, Sarah, and Michael to the Hartland staff. Mike works in the plant services department as an electrician.

Mike and Rowena are both from the Philippines but met in Loma Linda when Rowena was in nursing school. They have worked in Guyana, the Philippines, and at Laurelbrook Academy. They heard about Hartland when the Hartland Chorale presented a program at Laurelbrook Academy. A strong belief in prayer and allowing God to lead in their lives gives this family a strong incentive to live and work for Him in a place like Hartland. “We like the spiritual atmosphere here. It is a place to grow and to serve. “We feel that Hartland is following God’s blueprint, and while we do His work here, we will also be preparing for occasional trips to other lands to further the work there.”

It is a privilege to have staff members who are committed to serving our Lord in the ways that He has directed. May He bless Mike and Rowena and each of their children as they shine for Him.

VOLUNTEER

Gary Royer

“I knew that it would help me spiritually to be here,” said Gary Royer when asked why he returned to Hartland as a plant services volunteer.

“I was born into an Adventist family, but when I was about 13 or 14 I left the church. Then my father returned to the church and someone gave him some cassettes by Dr. Standish. In 1991 I attended a Daniel and Revelation seminar in West Virginia conducted by two Hartland students.

“At that time I came to Hartland as a pastoral-evangelism student, but allowed discouragement to overcome me. I left in the middle of the semester and also left the church. Unfortunately, I took my eyes off of Jesus, much like Peter did. But unlike Peter, I didn’t call out to Jesus for help.

“Now I’m back and my objective is to help Hartland and its students in the ways that God leads. Through a personal relationship with God, I hope to make a difference in the lives of those around me.”

We praise God the Holy Spirit for His consistent and insistent influence on Gary’s heart.
When I first came to Hartland, I didn’t come to the College directly, I came to the Academy, and there I saw that young people need to be inspired and motivated by the reality that Christ is coming back soon. Young people are the ones that have the most energy, and if they don’t think of this work, we might as well forget it,” explains Paige Stimpel, a double major studying Bible Instruction and Health Ministries. She continues sharing her vision: “I want to teach young people about who Jesus is, and what they can do to help others.”

Set to graduate in two years, Paige, from Camino, California, isn’t quite sure yet where this vision will take her, but she is confident that Hartland is preparing her for her future service. “I’ve gained an experience with God that I probably would not have gained anywhere else. I have learned a lot and gained many new friends from around the world. Many of them have invited me to work with them in their different ministries. I’m not sure where the Lord wants me to go, but I know He will show me when I need to know.”

Paige is largely on her own financially so she has no way to continue as a full-time student without financial assistance. Help from the Missionary Training Fund will enable her to get out into the field sooner. If it weren’t for the MTF, she admits, graduation would be “a really long way away.” She explains, “It has helped me to be able to take the regular amount of classes and not just have to focus on paying off my bill before I can study.”

The commitment Paige made when she accepted Missionary Training Fund sponsorship has also kept her at Hartland through trying times. “I remember that when I first came to the college, I wanted to leave because of certain circumstances that were trying my character. I didn’t know if I could take it. But because I had committed to being a part of the Missionary Training Fund, I stuck it out. God has used that to bless my life.”

To those of you who support the training of godly young people through the Missionary Training Fund, Paige says, “Thank you for making my dream of coming to Hartland possible! I now know how I can better serve my Lord.”

Paige wants to help her generation get motivated by the reality that Christ is coming back soon.
Use Every Opportunity!

Reggie Wright, class of 2005, shares how he started his ministry, Voice in the Wilderness.

by Miriam Bethel

“How did I start Voice in the Wilderness? Well, a friend and I sent out 25,000 pamphlets that advertised The Great Controversy and a book by Josiah Sutton called Illuminati 666. And then some friends and I put an audio tape together called “Mark of the Beast”. We got massive response from these mailings and then I started to branch out, doing research on religious liberty and the ministry just mushroomed in Great Britain.”

Meet Reggie Wright, 2005 pastoral evangelism graduate of Hartland College. In an HMR interview Reggie explains how his ministry began and how it has grown into what it is today.

Reggie began his quest for finishing God’s work long before his graduation day. He came to Hartland in 1993 with a vision for Great Britain. “I would be doing my classes and I would have my eye on the school break; I would be preparing for a mission trip in that break. There would be a focus. I remember Hal Mayer started to take me on speaking engagements with him. I knew I would only get one or two sermons, but I was like a hawk.” Reggie used every opportunity God gave him to get experience in ministry. He encourages Hartland’s current students to do the same.

After he and his friends sent out their pamphlets and cassettes on prophecy and religious liberty, Reggie “had the opportunity to preach in all of the SDA churches in London and the ministry just grew until it went to a lot of the major cities in Great Britain like Manchester.” Reggie has also preached in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Australia, France, Jamaica, Barbados, Canada, most of the British West Indies, Holland, and Central America.

Today Voice in the Wilderness has expanded its ministry to include the reprinting of important foundational books of the early Adventist pioneers like J. N. Andrews, John Loughborough, and James White. “We also print books that deal with prophetic interpretation, civil and religious liberty that today are very difficult to get. Apart from that we still hold prophecy seminars and weeks of prayer.”

What started as a vision in a young man’s heart has come to fruition by hard work and God’s tremendous blessing. It took Reggie nearly 12 years to finish his course work at Hartland, but he never gave up his goal to finish. Reggie’s focus has not dimmed and his drive for finishing God’s work is still unfolding, for his work is not yet over.

For more information about Voice in the Wilderness, you may contact Reggie at P.O. Box 2015, London, W12 9ZJ, England, or vitwwebsite@hotmail.co.uk.
Youth, Are You Preparing for Your Divorce?

YAYP1  $12.95
Colin & Russell Standish
A majority of youth, including Christian youth, are destined for divorce. Yes, you read this correctly! Unbeknown to them or to their parents, long before marriage or even courtship, the seeds of divorce have been sown to later produce their baneful consequences. Many youth who are thinking they are preparing for marital bliss are preparing for divorce and, all too frequently, their parents are co-conspirators in this tragedy. The authors provide amazing, simple principles to avert the likelihood of future divorce.

Youth Ministry In Crisis

YMIC1  $11.95
Barry R. Harker
The author examines the practices and passions that are transforming and debasing contemporary youth ministry—rock music, magic, clowning, comedy, drama, mime, puppetry, sports, extreme adventure activities, youth fashions, movies. He exposes the disturbing ideas that permit them to flourish in God’s church. This book is a timely corrective to the ideas and practices that are defacing the image of God in His people.

Youth, Do You Dare

Also available on CD and MP3
YDYD1  $10.95
Colin & Russell Standish
This book addresses questions concerning the meaning of life and how to handle the temptations that Satan places before young people today. It addresses the issue of moral purity, why it is so important, and how it can be maintained. We believe that you will find this a very relevant and helpful book. Our prayer is that as you read, you will be challenged, strengthened, and appreciative of the wise counsel that God has for young people today.

The Entertainment Syndrome

Also Available on CD and MP3
ESYN1  $12.95
Colin & Russell Standish
As late as 150 years ago, it is believed that Americans averaged not more than one hour of entertainment per week. Contrast that with studies that show that Americans now average about 40 hours of entertainment for that same period of time. This book explores how this mega increase in entertainment impacts the physical, emotional, social, intellectual, and spiritual life of the human race.

I once visited the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. and was moved by pictures of German youth who risked their lives to warn people of the Nazi’s deceptions. The earnest and determined looks on their faces made me think about the importance of youth in the final battle for souls.

Not long after, I found a narrative written by one of the surviving members of one such youth group from Hamburg entitled When Truth Was Treason. Helmuth Hubener, 17, Karl-Heinz Schnibbe, 17, and Rudi Wobbe, 14, knew that they could not overthrow the Nazis, but they felt they had to share the truth with their fellow Germans. They secretly acquired a radio to listen to the BBC and then published a series of anti-Nazi pamphlets based on the broadcasts. Their provocative titles such as “The Voice of Conscience,” “Hitler, the Seducer” and “Hitler, the Murderer” angered the Nazis.

When Helmuth first suggested distributing these homemade tracts, Karl was horrified. “Are you completely off your rocker? Surely you don’t think the three of us can overthrow the government?” he asked.

Helmuth replied, “We can inform people and demonstrate that there are groups who are opposed; then many persons can start to talk and say, ‘Have you heard about this? That’s amazing!’” The three teenagers courageously pinned their tracts on bulletin boards, placed them in mailboxes, and slid them into coat pockets.

Early in 1942 the three were tracked down, arrested, and brutally interrogated by the local Gestapo—who had difficulty believing that these youngsters had done such sophisticated work without adult help. At their trial in Berlin before Germany’s highest court, all three were convicted of high treason. Karl was sentenced to five years, Rudi to ten years and Helmuth, their leader, to death.

From prison, Helmuth wrote to a friend: “I know that God lives and He will be the Just Judge in this matter. I look forward to seeing you in a better world.” Asked if he had anything to say before his execution by guillotine, Helmuth replied, “Now I must die, even though I have committed no crime. So now it’s my turn, but your turn will come.”

When I think of the courage of these youth, I wonder how God is preparing young people today to see the seriousness of the situation in God’s church and to take action! The time of trouble is nearly upon us! We need more Helmuths, Karls, and Rudis than ever before. How about you? Are you part of the resistance to Satan’s attacks on God’s truth and God’s people?

Story adapted from When Truth Was Treason by Karl-Heinz Schnibbe.
One essential part of Hartland Institute’s ministry is Hartland Publications (HP), which both publishes and retails books and other media. Recently we interviewed Johny Carmouche, the Director of this Division about new developments Hartland Publications is pursuing.

A. Our mission is to aid in the fulfillment of the gospel commission and the proclamation of the Three Angels’ Messages by providing resources in both printed and electronic form. We want to help church members with their personal Christian growth and equip them to share their faith through literature evangelism.

Q. What do you have to offer?
A. HP provides books, DVDs, and other material that cover a wide range of topics, catering to the varying interests of our customers. Probably our largest section consists of tools to assist in Bible study, including titles from well-known authors such as E.J. Waggoner, Leslie Hardinge, Taylor Bunch, and Colin and Russell Standish. We also provide resources for personal evangelism including sharing DVDs, give-away tracts, Spirit of Prophecy books, and Joe Crews Library of Sermons.

In addition, part of our mission is to keep many of the older Reformation History books in print. We feature such famous books as J.A. Wylie’s History of Protestantism and D’Aubigne’s Reformation of the 16th Century. Of course, our offering would not be complete without inspirational music CD’s, documentary, science, nature, and music videos, a large selection of Spirit of Prophecy, a variety of books on healthful living, and many books and resources for children and homeschoolers.

Q. I hear that Hartland Publications is producing audio books.
A. Audio books are new to us. They can be used on long trips by using the CD player or the MP3 player. This is also a wonderful way to reach the visually impaired. We only have two right now, Entertainment Syndrome and Youth, Do You Dare, because it’s very difficult to find someone to read and record whole books. We would like to publish children’s books, mission stories, and books about history and prophecy, but we need volunteers to read the material aloud. Men, women, and children can send us a three- to five-minute demo of their reading.

Q. What’s new at HP?
A. E-books are becoming more popular. An e-book (short for “electronic book”) is an electronic version of a printed book. The most common method of getting e-books is to purchase a downloadable file of the e-book from a website to be read from the user’s computer or reading device. We have e-books available on our website, which our customers can download at 45% to 55% discount. More than 50% of our current inventory, plus all of the latest books we publish are available as e-books.

For more information, call Hartland Publications at 800-774-3577, go to our website at hartlandpublications.org, or email us at info@hartlandpublications.org.
When Hartland College graduate Leilani Hortaleza was very little, a Seventh-day Adventist neighbor girl would invite her home to play. Often, she stayed for dinner and worship. “I enjoyed worship, especially, because it was family time that I didn’t have.” Occasionally, Leilani would go with them to church. When she attended a Revelation Seminar fifteen years later, these childhood memories helped her to take a stand for the Sabbath.

Touching a young person’s life can have far reaching results.

Seth Lucas, music and health teacher at Hartland College, was attending public high school when he went on a mission trip to Mexico with young people from a missionary college. Their dedication influenced him to pursue missionary training.

Evangelists Doug Batchelor and Mark Finley each made personal commitments to Jesus as young people. Their youthful decisions to follow Jesus have affected the lives of many thousands.

Research shows that children presented with the gospel between the ages of 5 and 12 have a 32 percent probability of conversion, whereas adults have only a 6 percent probability.1 Jesus spent time with young people because “He knew that [they] would...accept Him as their Redeemer far more readily than would grownup people, many of whom were the worldly-wise and hardhearted.”2 This is why we need to take every opportunity to encourage our young people to make or deepen a commitment to Jesus.

Piedmont Valley Youth Bible Camp (PVYBC) has been instituted for the purpose of encouraging 12 to 17-year-olds to deepen their commitment to Jesus.

As Christine Lockwood was growing up, she attended a Seventh-day Adventist church every other week. Christine also attended PVYBC. “At camp I made more Adventist friends who helped keep me grounded. One counselor in particular took an interest in me and encouraged me in spiritual things,” shares Christine.

To our daughters Midori and Aiko, camp was the highlight of their year. I firmly believe that the truths and principles they learned at home and church were solidified at camp. Today, they are both active in soul-winning ministry.

Anca Chirvasuta says that PVYBC taught her how to develop a meaningful devotional life, a habit that has set her on a course to become a missionary.

As you read through the PVYBC testimonies in this issue, we praise God that, once again, He worked through the counselors and staff to help young people deepen their commitments to Jesus. When we see young people’s lives and attitudes change, the time spent making camp possible is worth every second!

Often when we think of miracles, we think of the raising of the dead or of instant healing. However, though providential meetings may not be nearly as dramatic, they are equally miraculous.

At the beginning of March I was traveling back from Dallas, Texas after a weekend of meetings. I had prayed for the opportunity to witness on the plane. A young lady with a 7-week-old son sat beside me. It did not seem that I would be able to engage her in a conversation, as she was totally occupied with her baby. So I took out my copy of Youth, Are You Preparing for Your Divorce and began reading. I was preparing for a youth conference to be held a couple of months later in Germany. Soon she noted the back cover and asked if she could read it. Of course, I gave it to her to read. She was very intrigued. I told her she could keep the book, as I could acquire another one.

What a wonderful conversation I had with her! She told me her mother had been divorced three times. She was afraid that she, too, would have a divorce, and this she very much wanted to avoid. As we dialogued, I realized she had an earnest desire that hers should be a strong Christian family.

We talked about the great principles of salvation and how Christ would lead her closer to Him if she studied the Bible and had personal devotions every morning. I explained the importance of having family worship with her son, morning and evening. She was very receptive. When the plane landed I prayed with her, and she thanked me sincerely for what I had revealed to her.

Some people might say this was a casual meeting or just happenchance. I do not believe this, because God so often provides me with unique opportunities to witness on planes, which I find a very exciting ministry.

Most of the people I talk to I will never meet again in this life. But I pray that in heaven I will see many of them again.

May God bless each one of you as you are seeking souls and leading them to heaven. Indeed, this is the greatest of miracles: the transformation of the hardened life to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, our Savior.
