After graduating in 2001, I went home to Eastern Canada to assist the publishing department in literature evangelism programs,” says Jonathan. “Over the last decade, the student summer colporteur program has really grown. Now I’m focusing my energies toward a new goal—spreading our literature through the medical missionary work.” The program he is developing is known as “Lifestyle Canada.”

Jonathan, who is now in charge of the publishing work in Eastern Canada, explains why he believes this approach fits his region. “It has always been harder to do literature evangelism in Canada than in America because people are much more secular. More than 85% of Canadians don’t go to church. Through Lifestyle Canada, literature evangelists are trained to provide lifestyle counseling and to sell books that help people improve their health. Colporteuring in this way financially provides for the canvasser and opens the door to place message books in the home. “I believe this is also a very effective way to find Bible study contacts, because of what we read in the Spirit of Prophecy,” he continues. “Publications treating on health reform are greatly needed. Literature bearing on this point is the helping hand of the gospel, leading souls to search the Bible for a better understanding of the truth.”

Lifestyle Canada is now operating full time in Ontario and during the summer in four other provinces that Jonathan directs. He is working to place lifestyle consultants in the more neglected territories, to work year-round. Jonathan, who has now spent fourteen years in publishing work, is convinced that Hartland College contributed to his current success: “The classes, touring choir, and work-study program were very helpful in establishing my work ethic, character, and a solid philosophy for this ministry.” After spending his first year on work scholarship, he was accepted into the Missionary Training Fund. He colporteured every summer as well. “I wouldn’t have been able to finish my education in a realistic time without that fund. It helped me to finish a couple of years sooner.”

Your generous donations to Hartland’s Missionary Training Fund helps students like Jonathan get into the field earlier. He would like to say, “Thank you for your generosity and for investing in the future of missionaries for these last days.”

What is it like to be diabetic for fifteen years? The developing pain and numbness in my lower limbs kept me from walking more than 40 feet. The weight piled on and strained my back; retinopathy of the eyes damaged my vision. I maxed out on medications to 190 units of insulin and 2,000 mg of diabetes medication daily. As each day passed, I was just waiting to die.

I needed help and half-heartedly looked at different lifestyle centers where I could find it. Then I met a lady who went to the Hartland Lifestyle Education Center, only a five-hour drive from home. She left the impression that not only did her health improve, but she also received spiritual and emotional healing. I called the number she gave, but only the answering machine picked up. Too discouraged to keep trying, I soon hung up. I’m so glad the director, Maria Gligor, called back five minutes later and encouraged me to come.

When I finally arrived, I could only walk across the parking lot before the pain stopped me. I was a pasty, dour, and miserable creature! Nevertheless, Maria motivated me to walk 50 steps more each day. Today, I walk over a mile. It’s a miracle! My husband is shocked and awed at the transformation because I look happy and I am happy. I feel alive!

There were struggles. As a “meat and potato” person, I didn’t eat vegetables or fruit. The thought of going to a lifestyle center where there would be nothing to eat but these items terrified me! Instead, the mouth-watering food they served surprised me. I loved the flavors; I enjoyed everything! Eating became a delicious, health-giving experience.

The results? Initial lab work found my white blood cell count at 12,000, signaling an infection, but it came down to 5,500 in only 18 days. I also lost 25 pounds. All the lab results showed great progress, and I am now down to only 45 units of insulin.

Coming to the lifestyle center definitely improved my health, but I also needed to be healed spiritually. That has happened largely as a result of the influence of the staff and students. These dedicated young people love the Lord; being surrounded with their energy filled me, fed me, and led me back to His arms.

I praise God for His goodness. I’m not just existing anymore, but I’m learning to live again. If you or someone you know needs help with diabetes, tell them to find a place where they can get help—and I suggest, by experience, that they come here!
On June 4 and 5, eight graduates from four continents committed their lives and talents to the service of God during an inspiring weekend at Hartland College. Fellow students, faculty, family, and friends gathered in the newly remodeled conference center to hear inspiring testimonies of God’s leading during the graduates’ student days and internships. We praise the Lord that these young people have gone forth to proclaim the Three Angels’ Messages to the world. Keep them in your prayers as they continue to follow God’s will for their lives.

“Such beautiful music!” one lady exclaimed. “I kept crying from the first song on,” confessed a gentleman. On May 14-16, 2010, the Hartland College choirs and guest soloists shared “Sing the Story,” a narrated musical presentation showcasing this region’s religious heritage in Madison, Orange, and Culpeper counties. “The presentation featured historical narrative generously laced with well-loved hymns, spirituals, and gospel melodies—songs that are touchstones of a common heritage between all Christians of this region.

“We spent a lot of time practicing these songs. People were in tears. I don’t think that would have happened if we hadn’t practiced or made the effort to sing from the heart,” points out one singer. Seth Lucas, director of the Campus Choir, rigorously rehearsed the dynamics of each piece before giving students this advice: “What comes from your voice can only reach the ear—but what comes from the heart will reach the heart.”

Students befriended people after each concert. One listener enthused, “Their Christian deportment—so young and yet so spiritual!” A Chinese student confided, “Talking with people before the concert was difficult.”

Cheng Long, tenor, meets concert guests at reception
After the concert, they treated me like an old friend! We discussed spiritual themes mentioned in the songs. The best time to make friends is after charming people with music!” Another student later met a listener at a farm fair. This person asked for a Bible study on the Sabbath.

Most importantly, the concert celebrated religious liberty. Betsy Mayer, director of the Three Angels’ Chorale, the College’s touring choir, explains, “It’s so easy to take the religious freedoms we enjoy for granted. This concert recognized the vital influence of our region in the development of American religious freedom—a standard admired by people of all nations.” Jeff Gordon, narrator for the concert, concurs: “Personal worship according to one’s conscience is a God-given right, not just for Americans, but for people the world over. We need to share this gift!”

As in previous years, “Sing the Story” accomplished this once more, and it is the desire of all who took part in this presentation to continue sharing in the future.

“As He died to make men holy, Let us live to make men free! While God is marching on.”

We welcome 2010 Hartland College graduate Kevin Wahl to the editorial staff of Hartland Ministry Report and Last Generation magazine.

“As a student, I spent a year of my vocational training at Last Generation,” shares Kevin. Although he was a Pastoral Evangelism major with the gift of preaching, the editorial office trained him to be an assistant. The experience opened Kevin’s eyes to other talents God had blessed him with, talents like copy-editing and writing.

During Kevin’s internship, managing editor Betsy Mayer sent him an e-mail saying, “Sure wouldn’t mind having you back at Last Generation!” Kevin eagerly offered his services in reply. Hartland Ministry Report also needed help in meeting their deadlines, giving him a chance to work with both periodicals. Kevin exclaims, “My new job is a wonderful opportunity to serve the Lord while developing the other talents He has given me.”

Kevin’s cheerful, willing spirit lightens our editorial load. We are glad he joined the Hartland ministry team as we continue in the Lord’s work.

After reading the Hartland Ministry Report that I found lying on the “Postum” table in the church office, I noticed that volunteers were needed for proofreading. I emailed Hartland and have been helping in a small way ever since. As a third-generation, lifelong Adventist, I have felt a need to help the cause, but have rarely found a way in which I was comfortable. Of course, “our comfort” is not what it’s all about, is it? The Bible does not relate stories of “making people comfortable.” I’ll have to consider that subject more.

The Last Generation magazine and Hartland Ministry Report are agents for the Lord that touch hearts in ways that personal witness might not. In Heaven, Jesus Himself may come to a magazine staff member and say, “Do you remember that issue you worked on in 2010? I’d like you to meet My friend who is here because of your faithfulness.”

I praise God that the results are not something that we must worry over. Our task is to do as He directs, and then leave the results in His capable hands.
By now all of you know that at the 59th General Conference Session, Elder Ted N.C. Wilson was elected to be the seventeenth General Conference president. He is the first son of a former General Conference president to follow in his father’s footsteps.

Many of us were praying for God’s blessing and guidance in the choice made at the session. So much is at stake. I am thrilled that the delegates, on the very first ballot, voted him to be the leader of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Elder J.C. Perozo, my assistant, joins me in those sentiments. He studied at Andrews University with Elder Wilson, and for some time they served the Lord together in the Greater New York Conference as young men. I have known Elder Wilson from his twenties and have developed a great respect and honor for this man who truly loves the everlasting gospel of the Three Angels’ Messages and the transcendent truths that God has entrusted to the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Elder Wilson has served God’s church in many capacities, and in that sense he is well qualified for the role to which he has been elected. He has served overseas in the Southern African-Indian Ocean Division. He was president of the Euro-Asian Division, which encompassed the territories of the former Soviet Union. He has been president of the Review and Herald Publishing Association and a general vice-president of the General Conference for the last ten years.

I have attended the last nine General Conference Sessions. Elder Wilson’s second Sabbath address was the most dynamic presentation I have ever heard. I was greatly inspired by the clarity and conviction with which he shared his loyalty to the precious principles and pillars of the Seventh-day Adventist faith. In order to recall a presentation equal to his, I had to think back to 1970, the very first General Conference Session I ever attended. It was then that Elder Robert Pierson made his appeal for revival and reformation. In 1975, Elder Pierson presented another wonderful appeal for revival and reformation with great earnestness. Years later, Elder Pierson told Elder George Burnside, Russell, and me that the reason reformation did not come was because “neither the ministry nor the laity were ready for it”—how very sad.

I believe that God has chosen another mighty leader in Elder Wilson. He will be buffeted and pressured to water down God’s truth, but I believe that it would be against his character and convictions to water down this precious message. Could he be the Joshua to lead God’s people into the Promised Land? My appeal is for everyone to read carefully his address to the Seventh-day Adventist people, and prayerfully seek to come up to all the calls he made in that address.

If God’s people heed Elder Wilson’s calls, then the third angel’s message, joined by the message of the angel of Revelation 18, could swell to a loud cry. Under the power of the latter rain, this loud cry will be proclaimed “to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people” (Revelation 14:6), or as Jesus said prior to His ascension, “to every creature.” Mark 16:15.
Our earnest prayers are needed every day for this man of God. Pray that no matter how attacked he may be by those who are not faithful to the true gospel, he will stand firm, ever seeking to help those who are confused by a false gospel. Let us pray that daily he will receive heavenly wisdom to understand from Scripture—the critical message which God has given to His people.

I admonish all readers to pray without ceasing for the Holy Spirit to work within his or her life. May all of us firmly believe the message, grow in it, and live up to it with all our heart, soul, and mind, as we earnestly study God’s Word. We must also ask the Lord for the skill to share the message with others whom we meet. Let this ever be our goal and purpose.

President Update

This past May 2010, the Hartland Institute Board of Directors selected Norbert Restrepo, Jr. as President-elect. We are currently awaiting the approval of his visa, which is expected to take another two or three months. Until that time, Dr. Standish remains in his current role as president. When Brother Restrepo assumes the presidency, the Standishes will continue to live on campus, and Dr. Standish will become President-emeritus, carrying on his very active roles for Hartland of preaching, teaching, writing, and counseling. Please pray that God will continue to lead in this transition process.
